

Time to Quit the Green Party of Canada

In the words of Albert Einstein, “a man should look for what is, and not for what he thinks should be.”

My experiences as a Federal Councillor and candidate for the Green Party of Canada have revealed the inner workings of an organization that is a far cry from its idealized self-portrayal.

Voters may wish for reasonable solutions to social and environmental challenges, equal democratic participation by all Canadians, and policies that benefit Canada and the world.

Successful and environmentally responsible government policies can only be sustainable if they are fiscally sound, broadly accepted, and widely implemented. The Green Party of Canada is not up this task.

New economic and environmental challenges demand critical thinking capable of generating opportunities while recognizing that a healthy ecosystem is a human right. Their holistic approach should live up to our ideals, including animal welfare, without blinders to the interconnectedness of those policies. They must offer a balance of ideas fairly representing their constituency. They must be fiscally prudent, socially progressive and environmentally responsible.

It is with this realization that I have resigned my position as Federal Councillor and member of the Green Party and confidently endorse Harvey Locke and his Liberal team for Calgary Centre. Please give your support to an entrepreneurial progressive voice that has a fantastic track record with conservation.

Sincerely,

Robert Miller
